Transfer Funds Between Your Accounts

State Farm Bank® lets you transfer you money between your accounts, even if the accounts are at other banks or institutions.

Whether you want to move some money into a personal savings account for an upcoming vacation or you want to set more aside in your money market account for a rainy day, we make sure that your money is where you want it to be without any transfer fees. We also go one step further and simplify the process of transferring money in from your external bank accounts.

To transfer money between Your State Farm Bank Accounts:

From the Transfer Funds section of your online account, you can select an account, choose an amount to transfer, and set the frequency of the transfer (if you want it to repeat). Clicking “Continue” will take you to a confirmation page where you can approve the transfer.

To transfer money between Your State Farm Bank and Non-State Farm Bank Accounts:

If you’d like to set up an external transfer, you will need both the routing and account numbers of the external account you’d like to transfer to or from. Follow the “Get started with external transfers” link on the left-hand side of the page to enroll your external bank account for transfers. This will take you to the Add an External Transfer Account page.

After selecting the account type, entering the routing and account numbers, and after confirming their accuracy, you’ll have a new external account ready to send money to.

You’ll also be able to make scheduled transfers once your external accounts are enrolled.
